Group attacks woman on Esplanade

State Police are investigating another assault on the Esplanade over weekend, but they don't believe it's connected to past incidents in the area.

According to reports, a group of men allegedly attacked a 31-year-old Cambridge woman as she jogged along the riverside Saturday night.

The victim was allegedly punched twice in the head after being surrounded by three men who were part of a group by the Community Boating, Inc. building.

The suspects were described as black males in their early 20s.

The victim told police the men were drinking by the waterfront area.

Police said the woman was able to break free from the attackers, but officers were unable to locate the suspects.

Officials are calling the attack a simple assault, and they are continuing to investigate.

Police said the attack did not result in a sexual assault, and the suspects' profile differs from that of the unsolved sexual assaults on the Esplanade in recent years. STEVE ANNEAR

T cops: Keep that smartphone safe

To date, 58 iPhones stolen at T stations this year • As new products hit the market, police say thefts increase • Safety tip campaign relaunched

With the launch of the newest iPhone product this weekend, Transit authorities are reminding MBTA riders to keep their devices close at hand.

"Anytime a new handheld technology is introduced it will spike [theft] statistics," said Transit Police Deputy Chief Lewis Best. "These larcenies are crimes of opportunity."

So far this year, 98 Apple products have been stolen from people while waiting at T stations.

Of those products, 58 of them were iPhones.

While the T police do a lot of regular outreach to customers riding the trains, reminding them to keep expensive products outside of view, a big push will be made later this year when more underground cell service is available.

By January, the Green and Blue lines are scheduled to be retrofitted with wireless capability, allowing people to talk and use the internet below the surface — and authorities plan to make a move when it happens.

"We have seen great results with the effects of our campaign — the whole message is don't become distracted," said Best. "And when carrying [a device], put it in an inside pocket or purse."

Best said during his 24 years on the force, it's been a common trend to see an influx in thefts as new technologies emerge on the market.

"We have many layers of security in place, however," he said.

Transit police will be handing out cards with tips and reminders on how to stay safe as the launch of the underground smartphone amenities draws closer.

Tips for the T

- Don't use phones while leaving the station.
- Don't lose track of your surroundings.
- Do write down serial number, color and make, and register the device.
- Don't lend your device to strangers.

Zebras escape at zoo

BOSTON. Things were off-color at the Franklin Park Zoo this weekend when two zebras from the park's exhibit escaped from a fenced-in area.

It took zoo officials an hour to corral the mother zebra and her baby while the park was evacuated, according to reports. The zoo reopened two hours later. METRO

Man, 19, stabbed to death

BOSTON. Police are investigating an early morning stabbing yesterday in front of the 7-Eleven store on Centre Street in Jamaica Plain that left a 19-year-old man dead.

Police said the victim was stabbed in the chest and rushed to Brigham and Women's Hospital, where he was pronounced dead.

The victim's name was not released. METRO

Police, protesters butt heads over ... butting heads

It's a battle of he said/she said, after more than 140 protesters were arrested last week while trying to expand their campground outside of Dewey Square as part of the Occupy Boston movement.

The occupiers claim some officers were forceful, throwing punches and dragging protesters by their throats when arresting them.

The police had a different version, however, saying protesters fought back, and in some cases assaulted officers.

Now, the American Civil Liberties Union is trying to gauge what might have gone down Tuesday morning at 1:30 a.m., as police stormed the section of the Rose Kennedy Greenway and arrested the protesters who were linked arm-in-arm around their encampment.

Overtime hours to date put in by the Boston Police Department due to Occupy Boston and the resulting arrests. That adds up to $146,189.55.

"We are interested in what has been going on and we put out a call [last] week to have protesters let us know if they had suffered mistreatment at the hands of the police," said ACLU spokesman Chris Ott.

Ott said the group is also interested in finding out if any protesters were allegedly interrogated about their political views during their arrests.

As of Friday, no one had filed a formal complaint with the ACLU or with the Boston Police Department.

'Rage' goes global: Occupy worldwide

Protests begun in New York spread throughout Asia, Europe Violence troubles Italy, peaceful elsewhere

GIORGIO COSULICH/GETTY IMAGES

▶ Protests in Rome were marred by antagonists.

The global "Day of Rage" against the world's financial system won some limited sympathy from political and economic leaders yesterday after protests that were peaceful everywhere but Italy.

Cities from East Asia to Europe and North America saw rallies on Saturday denouncing capitalism, inequality and economic crisis, but riot police were busy only in Rome.

The city cleared up yesterday, a day after masked "Black Bloc" protesters torched cars, attacked banks and hurled rocks.

"They must be condemned by everyone without reservation," Prime Minister Silvio Berlusconi said. Yet many Italians asked why police had managed to arrest only 12 of the violent demonstrators.

Lisbon and Madrid also saw tens of thousands march on Saturday. Spanish outrage has been fueled by multimillion-euro payouts for top staff at failed regional banks.

Other cities across the United States and Canada saw modestly sized and peaceful demonstrations and protesters gathered in their hundreds in Japan and across Southeast Asia.

"One word: accountability," professor Hayat Alvi of the United States Naval War Collegen said. REUTERS

Submit your pics for chance to win

This year there are four themes for entries: environment, relationships, moments of my life and imagination.

This year Metro is, under the Imagination category, inviting entries of images that have been manipulated digitally or are collages in addition to traditional photos.

In the categories of environment, relationships, moments from my life and imagination, there will be eight winners — four chosen by Metro's panel of judges and four by people liking the entries on Facebook.

To enter

Full details of how to enter and conditions of entry are on the competition website, www.metrophotochallenge.com

The eight local winners from Boston will then go head to head with local winners from every other Metro city around the world.

A panel of judges will then pick a global winner in each of the four categories. These Global Winners will be announced Dec. 20, and the winners will each win a trip worth 1,000 Euros ($1,380) to any city where Metro publishes (the full list is available at www.metro.lu).

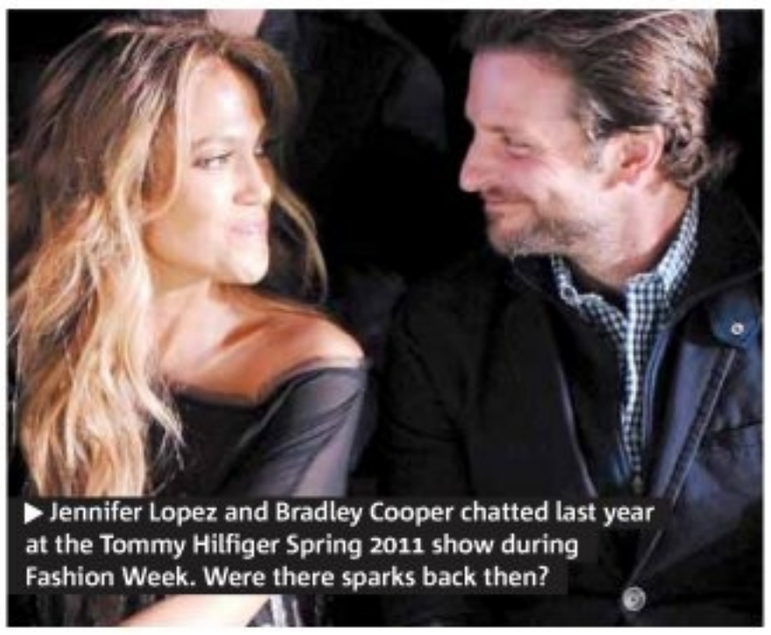
THE WORD

Metro's Dorothy Robinson shares her take on the world of gossip @dorothyatmetro dorothy.robinson@metro.us

This weekend's celebrity movers and shakers

In today's column, we'll look at the celebrities moving toward one another, those moving farther apart and one who found his way out of the closet over the weekend.

On the up and up? Bradley Cooper and Jennifer Lopez. (Maybe!) The actor stepped out recently with a woman who looked a lot like the "American Idol" judge, though she was going to great lengths to shield herself from photographers, according to Us Weekly. A source close to the singer says it was in fact Lopez meeting up with the "Hangover" star, getting together again after having dinner last month. "After their date in New York, Bradley and Jennifer stayed in touch," the source says. "She does like his attention, and it makes her feel good that he seems so into her. She has a fun time with Bradley and he makes her laugh."



▶ Jennifer Lopez and Bradley Cooper chatted last year at the Tommy Hilfiger Spring 2011 show during Fashion Week. Were there sparks back then?

DOROTHY ROBINSON'S WORD BLOG

But while these two might be getting tight, it looks like Ashton Kutcher and Demi Moore are heading toward splitsville. A moving truck was seen pulling up to the couple's L.A. home late last week, according to Us Weekly. The moving company, Wetzel & Sons, would not divulge any information about the job. While it's unclear who may be vacating the premises, sources speculate Kutcher would be the one kicked to the curb. "Demi is humiliated," a source says. "She loves him, but can't forgive him for the embarrassment he has caused."

Meanwhile, although there is no gossip regarding who Zachary Quinto is or isn't dating, there is one thing for certain: He likes dating dudes.

In a New York interview, the "Star Trek" actor chatted about his role in the off-Broadway production of "Angels in America," saying, "As a gay man, it made me feel like there's still so much work to be done, and there's still so many things that need to be looked at and addressed."

And that, actors, is a great way to come out. No fanfare, no tabloid cover, just a straight-forward piece about your work. Mazel tov!

Talking points

Lautner likes ladies, OK?

Taylor Lautner is going on the record about his sexuality after being quizzed by the Australian edition of GQ about a recent night out with director Gus Van Sant and writer Dustin Lance Black, both of whom are openly gay. When asked if either of the men hit on him, Lautner said, "No, definitely not. I think they know I'm straight." The 19-year-old "Twilight" star said that the meeting was all business: "It's not a coincidence that there was a writer, a director and an actor at dinner."

Chris Tucker forecloses

Chris Tucker may end up losing his Florida mansion, as he owes the bank more than $4 million on the foreclosed home — and that's on top of the $11.5 million lien the IRS placed on the home earlier this year for unpaid income taxes, according to Hollyscoop. Tucker, at least, is finding ways to joke about his situation. "That's the last time I let Wesley Snipes help me out with my taxes," Tucker quipped at a recent stand-up gig, according to the Miami New Times. He might not be laughing so much about the house's value: Tucker purchased it for $6 million, but the property is reportedly currently appraised at $1.6 million.

Downey: Forgive Mel!

Robert Downey Jr. wants the world to forgive Mel Gibson. While accepting an award from the American Cinematheque, the star took a moment to address Hollywood's treatment of the Oscar-winning director and actor, according to Us Weekly. "Unless you are without sin — and if you are, you are in the wrong f—ing industry — you should forgive him and let him work," Downey said. "There's nothing so much wrong with him. He's a good dude with a good heart."

Little Dragon, big influence

Swedish band may be popular with listeners, but they're possibly an even bigger hit with other artists

Little Dragon may be the quintessential artist's band. The music that the Swedish four-piece make strikes a nerve with fans, but especially with other musicians. They play conventional rock instruments, but their heavy emphasis on keyboards gives the songs an electronic gloss. Combined with pop and funk sensibilities, the songs sound how Stereolab might if Prince joined the band.

Bassist Fredrik Kallgren Wallin says sharing ideas with other bands is one of his favorite aspects of playing with Little Dragon. They have collaborated with Gorillaz, indulged in a side project with Jose Gonzalez and traded remixes with Unknown Mortal Orchestra — which Wallin says was an especially rewarding experience: "It's a nice way of exchanging energy. It's not a collaboration, but you can add your flavor or get some new flavors for your own."

What actually drew Metro to the band was other artists talking about Little Dragon. Word of mouth has always been a key to finding the best new music, and when the mouths delivering that word are well-respected singers, it's even harder to ignore. When we asked Janelle Monae what she was listening to lately, Little Dragon was one of the first acts she mentioned.

TITIA HAHNE/REDFERNS/GETTY IMAGES

And Sameer Gadhia of Young the Giant, who played this year's MTV Video Music Awards, said Little Dragon would be a dream collaboration, literally.

"I actually had a dream about playing with them last night," he said at the time. "I was hanging out at their house and I started drawing something in a sketchbook, and we just started talking. ... We were not really collaborating as much yet, but I guess it was coming into formation."

When we share this anecdote with Wallin, he has a good laugh. "That sounds fun," he says.

'Ritual Union'

The artwork for Little Dragon's new album, "Ritual Union," is populated with snapshots of couples on their wedding day. And the title track explores the idea of marriage with a slight air of fear. Wallin explains the contrast.

"It's from our family archives of parents, relatives and grandparents," he says. "It's supposed to be the happiest day of your life, and a lot of our parents are divorced."

Marblehead native Emily Yetter plays a true-to-life Tinkerbell in J. M. Barrie's 'Peter Pan' The actress on the technology that will have the whole audience feeling really high

Emily Yetter spends 30 minutes of her performance suspended in the air. She's not a trapeze artist — she plays a remarkably true-to-life Tinkerbell.

Though "Peter Pan" is of course a fantasy story, this production can be called "realistic" for two reasons: First, it's closely based on J. M. Barrie's original book, published in 1904. Second, the characters really soar through the air, across an enormous, 360-degree video screen.

"When the characters fly through London, the audience feels like it's flying through London too," says Yetter, who is a Marblehead native. The high-resolution ceiling is three times bigger than an Imax theater's screen. The panoramic screen plus flying up to 30 feet in the air make for an unusual stage experience.

"You not only have to concentrate on what you're doing with the wires and making sure you're safe," Yetter says. "You also have to make sure it looks good while you do the scene."

For flying purposes, Yetter wears a harness under her costume, but she's not hooked to a wire when just moving about the stage on foot. When it's time to take to the air, she has to casually clip up.

"It seems kind of anti-acting, but you make it part of your character," Yetter explains.

'Real Steel' KOs the competition yet again

Boxing robot movie "Real Steel" won the domestic box office for the second straight weekend, edging out a remake of 1980s dance classic "Footloose."

"Real Steel" brought in about $16.3 million at U.S. and Canadian theaters, according to studio estimates released yesterday. The action movie starring Hugh Jackman landed slightly ahead of "Footloose," which brought in an estimated $16.1 million.

Third place went to horror movie "The Thing" with $8.7 million.

Song Therapy

by Dev

The coolest thing about this song, currently No. 1 on the Billboard dance chart, is probably how the main riff — almost always done by some synth-y sounding instrument in club music — actually sounds like a saxophone. It probably isn't an actual sax, but it is a spicy sound to hear that's unexpected. Credit for that goes to producers, the Cataracs. You'll recognize Dev's voice from "Like a G6" by the Far East Movement from last year. In this song she sings about dancing in the dark and letting her hands do what they want, but the line you'll be singing the next morning a little too loudly is, "I've got a sex drive. Push to start," especially if you do have one of those newish cars that doesn't need a key to get it going. Regardless, this song is the key to get your night going. Where to hear: iTunes, Spotify

Greening up the office

You recycle at home, so what's the deal with tossing that giant stack of paper on the copier tray in the trash? How you can leave a softer environmental footprint Why big companies are interested

At home, most of us wouldn't think about leaving the air-conditioner on full blast while leaving town for a couple days. Or tossing a luncheon's worth of plastic bottles directly in the trash. Or using individually packaged creamers for a cup of coffee from a massive pot we'll never finish.

And yet in the office, these are common practices even among those who consider themselves environmentally friendly. In their new book, "The Complete Idiot's Guide to Greening Your Business," co-authors Trish Riley and Heather Gadonniex look at companies' most wasteful policies, as well as practical solutions — of which, Riley points out, there are many.

"Solutions are happening just as fast as the problems are — and people don't realize that, they think we're just sunk," she says. "And sure, we're not going to save the planet unless big businesses get on board, but what's cool is that big businesses are getting on board. They're doing these things to meet consumer needs — because they know this is what we want."

One of the companies profiled in the book, Clif Bar, goes far beyond the usual recycling bins, offering incentives for employees who drive hybrid cars and take public transportation to work in addition to offering flexible telecommuting options to further reduce fuel usage. While these perks end up costing an employer a little extra, they contribute to something almost priceless: The perception that they care.

"Money talks," admits Riley. "But when they show their customers that money is not the most important thing, that they care about our environment and the future of it, that goes a long way — especially with consumers with children."

▶ Desk-side recycling bins make it easy to do the right thing. For more on how to green your business and community, visit Trish Riley's sustainability website at www.gogreennation.org.

1. Don't simply turn off your computer at night — unplug it. The machines use a small amount of "phantom energy" when plugged in, hence the subtle glow and eerie hum of a room full of computers that are seemingly off.

2. Establish an office compost bin in the kitchen in addition to the now-standard recycling bins.

3. Make sure lights are off and that heating and cooling systems are adjusted for hours when the office is empty.

4. Create a greening committee. "When an office decides they want to do something like this, they have to create a team of people across the spectrum who makes sure that everyone, top to bottom, understands."

High-profile jobs not as desirable as they seem

While they make for great cocktail conversation, some of the most prestigious careers aren't quite as enviable as they seem, according to a new report from job search portal CareerCast.com.

"There's a lot of perceptions out there about what a good job is, and a lot of the time the perception is wrong," says Career Cast publisher Tony Lee. "Yes, these do pay a lot, but there are a lot of drawbacks to these jobs. We looked at things like stress, work/family balances, the hiring outlook down the road and compensation."

"There's a lot of perceptions out there about what a good job is, and a lot of the time the perception is wrong."
TONY LEE

Career Cast's list includes some of the usual suspects in a struggling economy (stock brokers, real estate agents) as well as plenty of health care professionals.

We asked Lee for some background on those that topped the list.

Senior corporate executive

Average income: $160,141
While some execs are undoubtedly dismissive of the Occupy gang, others are feeling the heat — albeit in swanky corner offices. "Senior corporate executives are under extreme pressure right now. You have falling profits, you have shareholder pressure," says Lee. "You look at the protests and you think, 'These people don't care.' But a lot of them do care — they don't want to do layoffs, and they're working more hours."

Surgeon, physician, psychiatrist

Average incomes: $365,258; $192,065; $160,242
"What these all have in common is that they're responsible for people's lives. People are reliant on them, and that has always been stressful," says Lee. "But more recently, with government regulations and more paperwork, it's not the case anymore that you can play golf on Wednesdays and pay back your loans."

Airline pilot, flight attendant

Average incomes: $106,153; $40,184
As fuel prices rise and airlines cut back on staff, passengers aren't the only ones who are less comfortable. "The reality is the hours are at their highest that they've ever been, you have less control over your days and pay has not risen," says Lee. Something to keep in mind when you're watching "Pan Am" — or getting ready to grumble about the skimpy bag of pretzels on your next flight. METRO/MW

Hip-hop culture on the campus

Underground hip-hop scenes can thrive with help from the resources of colleges Emery Petchauer on the benefit to students, artists and schools

Around 1990, Emery Petchauer was exposed to De La Soul and A Tribe Called Quest. His life would never be the same.

Now — after 20 years spent in various hip-hop scenes as an artist, organizer and scholar — Dr. Petchauer has completed his first book examining the culture of hip-hop on college campuses. "Hip-Hop Culture in College Students' Lives: Elements, Embodiment, and Higher Edutainment" will be released by Routledge Books this month. "There's been a lot of talk about hip-hop in education for a while, but most of the time it's focused on how teachers use rap music in order to teach," says Petchauer, who is currently a professor at Lincoln University in Philadelphia. "I wanted to look at the creative spaces where people create hip-hop and develop habits of body, habits of mind — and how they take those habits into educational environments. It's a way to conceptualize and understand their education."

Based on Petchauer's doctoral thesis, "Hip-Hop Culture" examines the underground hip-hop scenes at three anonymous U.S. colleges located in Southern California, the Northeast and the South. "I wasn't focusing on students that just listened to hip-hop. I was interested in the kids that create and sustain hip-hop culture — these are MCs, dancers, DJs, graffiti writers and event organizers," explains Petchauer. "Hip-hop has a tendency to co-opt the power of larger institutions in society and appropriate them for a different use. There's an incredible amount of resources on college campuses that people involved with hip-hop can use to their advantage. College radio and rehearsal spaces have had this core relationship with hip-hop from the beginning."

Erudite critic: OWS analysis

A social, psychological and political analysis of the ongoing Occupy Wall Street movement demonstrates the theories of anarchism in their respective lack of a thorough analysis of American society. The OWS protesters criticize the corporative status quo and the military as instruments of American foreign policy, and have neither a nascent political party nor a platform of principles or demands necessary for concrete political and economic reform. JOSEPH N. MANAGO, VIA E-MAIL

In space, no one to sell to

RE: "WE'D BE WILLING TO LEAVE": When he fantasizes about the "1 percent" leaving us to colonize another planet and taking medical science, iPods and sporting venues with them, Jesse Aldous suggests that some of the top 1 percent aren't as bright as they think. Who they will be selling gadgets, medical care and sports tickets to up there — themselves? The "1 percent" need the "99 percent" a lot more then we need them. In fact, some of us will be happy to help build your spaceships for you — at least you will have finally created some jobs. ROBERT TROMBETTA, VIA E-MAIL

End it: It's the jobs, stupid!

You want to put an end to this protest? Wall Street was bailed out by the tax payers of these here United States, and every large institution should repay the citizens by offering full-time jobs. There's no way around this: Job creation is what we need, otherwise, this will continue with no end in sight; these folks have nothing better to do. JIMMY CORREA, VIA E-MAIL

This protest really stinks

It's time to stand up and demand the police put an end to OWS. They have become nothing more than a bunch of bums hangin' out in a shantytown that the taxpayers are paying to maintain. I say let them sleep in their own feces — they seem to be comfortable with that. MICHAEL CHIMENTI, VIA E-MAIL

Occupy Wall Street stinks to high heaven. There is the smell of bundled mortgages, the smell of corporate welfare, the smell of foreclosure; the smell of tax breaks for the wealthy, of irrelevant elections, of pepper spray ... but the most disturbing smell is that of those standing up and screaming loudly, "Enough is enough!" SUZY SANDOR, VIA E-MAIL

Brady, Patriots fall behind Cowboys, only to pull it out with a last drive for the ages ◗ 'Terrific' QB the modern-day Joe Montana ◗ New England defense shows up to play once more ◗ But the offensive line has trouble

GETTY IMAGES

1 'D' up— To give up just 16 points to a superb offense like Dallas' is a true testament to the improvement of the defense over the last two weeks. They held the Cowboys to just 4-for-12 on third down. And in the fourth, Dallas had the ball with a three-point lead and just over three minutes to play. The Pats 'D' needed to stand strong, and it held Dallas to three and out — getting the offense that one last chance.

2 The last drive — Down three points, the Pats got the ball with 2:31 left to play. That's Tom Brady time. Starting from his own 20, the QB immediately hit Aaron Hernandez for 16 yards, then Rob Gronkowski for 11. A Wes Welker catch netted New England 5 yards, then Brady hit him for a first down on the Dallas 38. Danny Woodhead hauled one in for 9 yards the next down, and two plays later caught a key 13-yarder to the 14. Welker put the Pats inside the 10, and Hernandez made a nice catch for the TD. It was, in short, classic.

What went wrong ...

1 No O-line — Dallas' defensive unit is strong, and they made sure Brady knew it all game, knocking him down repeatedly. It was the constant pressure that prevented the Pats from pulling away.

2 Coughing it up — Four turnovers? That's very unlike New England. Fortunately for them, Dallas didn't make the most of those key opportunities.

3 Can't solve Rob — The Pats waited until the closing seconds of the fourth quarter to score their first points of the second half. The four drives before that? Punt, fumble, interception, punt. Their 20 total points are the fewest since Week 9 of last season — when Rob Ryan was defensive coordinator of the Browns.

Tragedy on the track: Wheldon dies in crash

IndyCar star killed in massive pileup in Las Vegas ◗ Just 33 years old, he leaves behind a wife and two young sons ◗ Season finale called after accident ◗ Drivers return for five-lap tribute ◗ Franchitti champ again

GETTY IMAGES

▶ There was no way for Wheldon to avoid the massive crash.

Two-time Indianapolis 500 champ Dan Wheldon died yesterday after a horrific crash in the opening laps of the Las Vegas Indy 300.

The English driver, 33, was caught in a fiery 15-car pileup at Las Vegas Motor Speedway. He was flown by helicopter to a nearby hospital but succumbed to "unsurvivable injuries," IndyCar Series CEO Randy Bernard said in a statement.

"Our thoughts and prayers are with his family today," Bernard said.

Wheldon won the 2005 Indy Racing League title, as well as the '05 and '11 Indianapolis 500s.

The race was canceled immediately after the accident, but drivers returned to the track for an emotional five-lap tribute with Wheldon's fellow British driver, Dario Franchitti, sobbing uncontrollably as he was strapped back into his car.

Crews lined up along the pit lane and fans in the stands stood silently as the drivers paid tribute to the popular Wheldon.

The canceling of the race meant that Franchitti won his third straight series title.

Wheldon moved to the U.S. after winning eight British national titles in karting and then finishing third in the 1998 Formula Ford championship.

A nine-run third inning — keyed by two-run hits from David Murphy, Ian Kinsler and Michael Young — started the rout in earnest. Texas clinched the series at home after Detroit's 7-5 win in Game 5.

2 The Lions are undefeated no more. Frank Gore rushed for 141 yards and a TD as the San Francisco 49ers felled Detroit, 25-19, at Ford Field yesterday. The Lions went up 10-0 in the first, but a Gore TD, a safety and a field goal put the 49ers ahead, 12-10, at halftime. An Alex Smith TD pass in the fourth put them up for good.

3 LSU remained No. 1, and the rest of the top 10 of the AP Top 25 football poll was unchanged after a nearly upset-free weekend. The highest-ranked team to go down was No. 11 Michigan, which dropped a sloppy contest to in-state rival Michigan State. METRO

Bruins shaking off the Stanley Cup hangover?

The Bruins you know and love from last year's playoff run might just be back.

After a lethargic start to the season, Boston topped Chicago 3-2 on Saturday in the Windy City.

GETTY IMAGES
▶ Tyler Seguin's Bruins are 2-3-0 on the season.

The shootout win — Tyler Seguin scored the only goal in the extra frame — seems to be an excellent sign. After losing two straight and three of four, the B's notched a 'W' against a good team in a tough building.

They're off today before returning to the Garden tomorrow night against Carolina (7 p.m., NESN, 98.5 FM). That's the start of a four-game homestand.

Dartmouth-Hitchcock MEDICAL CENTER
Lebanon, New Hampshire

Organ Transplant Coordinator

At the direction of the Surgical and Medical Directors of Solid Organ Transplant Surgery, this position will participate as a member of the multi-disciplinary solid organ transplant team. The Organ Transplant Coordinator will assume responsibility for ensuring the smooth and efficient delivery of health care services from the initial referral through the transplant maintenance phase. The Coordinator will independently organize health care resources at DHMC, and analyze and record data relevant to the transplant program. The Coordinator will also facilitate the education for nursing and medical personnel at DHMC and other facilities that care for our patients as well as maintain compliance with state, federal and UNOS regulations. Additionally, the Coordinator will assist with the education of nursing staff in the areas of normal renal function, transplant and renal donation with emphasis on identifying nursing problems. This position will also participate in the development of both internal and external educational programs related to organ transplantation involving outside dialysis centers, hospitals and other referral groups as well as appropriate nursing service and hospital committees.

Requirements include a BSN with state licensure eligibility in the state of NH along with 3 years of nursing experience or the equivalent combination of education and experience. Two years of nephrology nursing experience is preferred. Demonstrated clinical competence in the area of organ transplantation required; specialty certification preferred (and required after one year).

Dartmouth-Hitchcock Medical Center (DHMC) is an academic institution located in Lebanon, New Hampshire on the Vermont/New Hampshire border. Dartmouth-Hitchcock Medical Center includes a modern 400-bed tertiary care hospital, research and clinical facilities for Dartmouth Medical School, Norris Cotton Cancer Center and the Dartmouth-Hitchcock Clinic, a region wide multi-specialty community practice group started in 1927. We have also consistently been rated one of America's Best Hospitals by U.S. News & World Report.

Please apply online at: www.dartmouth-hitchcock.org
We are an equal opportunity employer.
